Shows RENAULT saloon E98 HLD

0315 hours 12th July 2002

Note: the car was claimed to belong to Nicholas Gbadamosi, but the registration number cannot be identified even from the colour footage and the car is blue, rather than red. The stills were used for the purpose of identifying the car and not the person who got out and was marked by white arrows.

DC Mark Prince stated that the person was wearing a baseball cap, whereas the colour footage shows that the person is actually bald. In an action report A2944 the police acknowledged that the person was "possibly Benguit" - yet the police and CPS still prosecuted him three times.

It is not possible to even notice that Benguit is standing next to the phone box. He then made a call from the other box to his drug dealer Delroy Woolry, who was deported by the police on 5/9/02 as a visa

Still 6

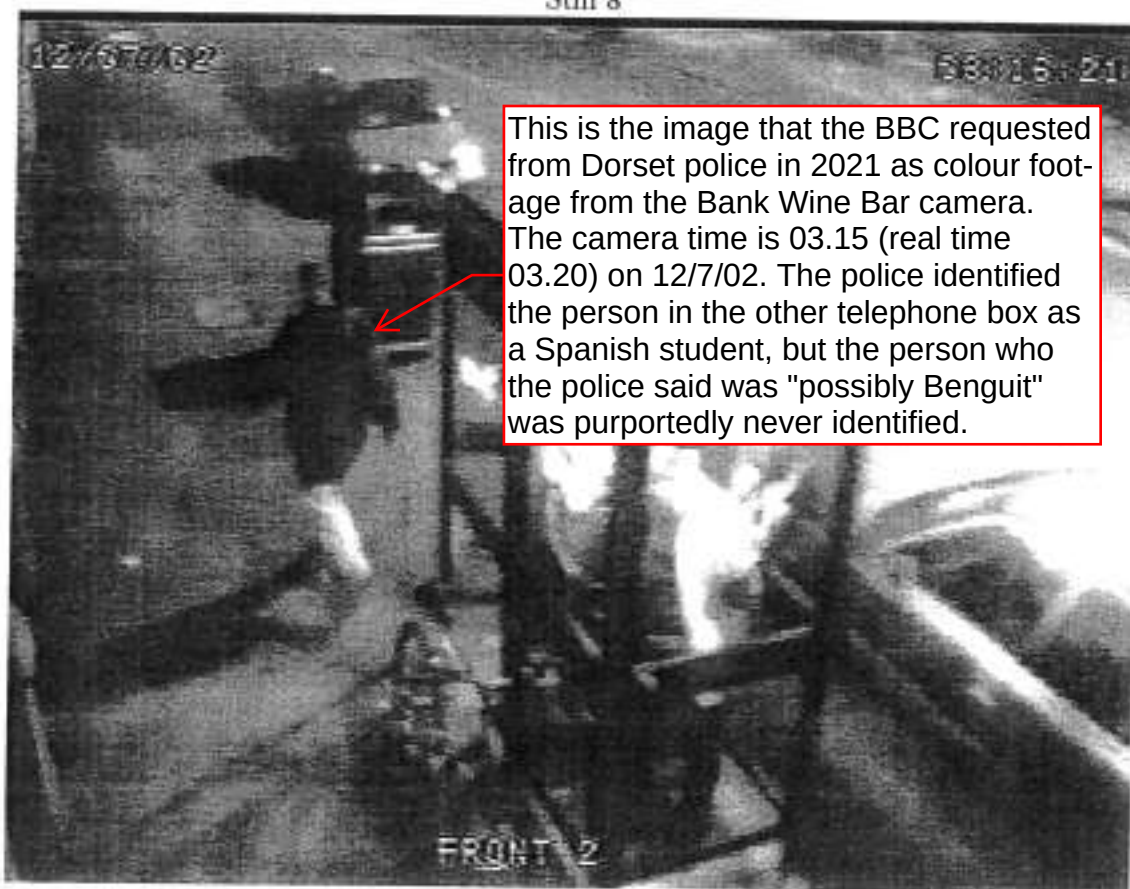

Benguit entering the phone box. The call to Delroy Woolry lasted a few seconds and so was used as a signal that Benguit had arrived to buy drugs.

The police marked the person with a white arrow, but there is no way that the person could be identified from such an image, as the person is too far away from the camera.
